Jeff Abbott weaves a multi-layered spy thriller that is one cliffhanger after another. The thing everyone wants, everyone is killing or dying for is a drug called "frost," It's a pill for PTSD (Post Traumatic Stress Disorder) sufferers that, in conjunction with therapy, breaks the chain of automated heightened responses to traumatic memories. A timely subject. With so many of our soldiers ...

Jeff Abbott is one of those wonderful thriller authors whose penchant for and skill in putting action on every page overcomes any gaps in their plotting. In "Fear" the plots and sub-plots keep the reader guessing to the very end. In short, "Fear" is a page-turner, as I learned when the numerals on the digital clock weren't the only thing glowing: so was the sky as the sun rose - it was just ...
